American Prosthetic Components Receives $250,000 in State Tax Credits

Green Bay Company to Expand Facilities, Create 51 New Jobs

NEW NORTH, June 21, 2007 – American Prosthetic Components, a Green Bay-based manufacturer of prosthetic components, received $250,000 tax credits from the Department of Commerce to help the company expand its current facility.

The Technology Zone tax credits were announced by Governor Doyle and presented by Department of Commerce Secretary Mary Burke at the company's plant on Thursday.

"The economy in the New North is booming, and it's great to see Governor Doyle and the State of Wisconsin support the region's growing businesses," said Jerry Murphy, Executive Director of the New North, Inc. "With the help of Governor Doyle, the New North will continue to work to grow the economy, and get the word out about why the Northeastern Wisconsin is a great place to live and do business."

American Prosthetic Components, Inc., which was established in 2002, plans to remodel and create an addition to its current facility – a project which is expected to create 51 new jobs and cost an estimated $4,240,000.
